In early adulthood, all of our skin cells - including those in our lips - begin to become more porous and less elastic. If shea butter - a substance that both moisturizes the skin and restores the skin cells elasticity - is applied to the lips, then not only are the cells hydrated, but they gradually regain their natural elasticity so that they are better able to keep moisture from escaping.

Because unrefined shea butter contains both a high moisturizing fraction and an extraordinarily high healing fraction, it is a wonderful agent for revitalizing our skin cells so that they get back their moisture retention capacity.
